

ABSTRACT

Bayu

11819297

Interpersonal Communication of Overseas Students with Parents in SelfDisclosure

Keywords: Interpersonal Communication, Overseas Students, Parents, SelfDisclosure

(xi+63+Attachment)

Interpersonal Communication Process between Overseas Students and Parents in selfdisclosure. From the focus of this research, the following research questions emerge: Interpersonal communication of Overseas Students with Parents in Self-disclosure. The method used by the author in this study is a qualitative research method. This study aims to determine the interpersonal communication of overseas students with their parents in self-disclosure to Gunadarma University students from class 2019 who come from outside the region. In this research, the writer gives the problem limitation to focus on the title of interpersonal communication between overseas students and their parents in self-disclosure. The theory used in this research is attribution theory. Attribution theory explains the process of how we can determine the causes and motives for a person's behavior. The conclusion of this study is that not a few of the overseas students have not been open to their parents about the situation and conditions that they are currently experiencing in studying outside the area, ranging from campus problems, to the tight schedule of lectures that make them not fully able to manage time so that it interferes with their health. , but there are also some who have slowly been able to overcome the problems they are experiencing by learning to manage their busy lecture schedule.

Bibliography (2001-2020)