

ABSTRACT

MARTIN LAURENS HAPOSAN SIHOMBING. 22029221

Communication Between Bk Teachers And Students In Counseling Assistance At High School 107 Jakarta

Keywords: Communication, Counseling Teacher, Counseling Assistance, Student Counseling Assistance, High School Students

(xi + 44 + Appendices)

This study aims to determine how communication between counseling teachers and students in counseling assistance at SMAN 107 Jakarta, as well as the obstacles that occur between counseling teachers and students. The method used in this research uses qualitative methods. In writing this scientific research using Identity Construction theory. Based on the results of research on students at SMAN 107 Jakarta. A person's self-identity can be formed because of public demands for the role given and also sometimes a person's social relations can have an impact on changing the identity of members and even the community in which a person is located depending on how strong the person's influence is in his social environment. personal identity is determined by "the growth of individual consciousness and the growth of society. Thus, the communication process between counseling teachers and students is a multifaceted interaction characterized by active listening, empathy, and building trust, including face-to-face interactions, group sessions, and digital platforms, to build rapport and provide personalized support.

Bibliography (2017-2022)