ABSTRACT

For couples who like to work, which couple likes to be comfortable is the best part of the quality of a loving relationship in an adult attachment that reflects happiness and functioning in marriage so as to achieve good marriage satisfaction. The sampling technique used in this study is nonprobability sampling, with a purposive sampling method. The sample criteria in this study were 100 working wives, ranging in age from 22-45 years, having children, marriage age over two years, and workers in the formal sector. The data analysis technique used in this study is the Pearson Correlation. Based on the results of this study it is known that the safe attachment and satisfaction of the hypothesis is accepted with a value of $r = 0.779$ with a significance level of $0.000 (p < 0.01)$, the attachment attachment hypothesis is accepted with a value of $r = 0.310$ with a significance value of $0.000 (p < 0.01)$, and in the attachment the ambivalent hypothesis was accepted with a nominal value of $r = 0.409$ with a significance value of $0.000 (p <0.05)$. This result shows that each adult attachment style has a relationship with the satisfaction of marriage at work.
